The Ego and the Self. Translate : The etymology of the word ego is simply 'I' in Latin. It was used by Latin speakers in the very same way that we use the first person singular nominative case personal pronoun in modern English, which is 'I'. In present day, we use the word 'Iego' to make a specific distinction; for example when we wish to address an inflated sense of self-worth, but also to refer to our identity that we have built around ourselves.

The Elements of Ego Functioning | Psychology Today

The idea that there are two centers of the personality distinguished Jungian psychology at one time. The ego has been seen as the center of consciousness, whereas the Self is defined as the center of the total personality, which includes consciousness, the unconscious, and the ego; the Self is both the whole and the center. While the ego is a self-contained center of the circle contained within the whole, the Self can be understood as the greater circle.

Self in Jungian psychology - Wikipedia

But the sense of self or the ego, is a collection of both past memories and events (traumas, fears, ideologies, beliefs, social conditioning, etc) and future ideas (expectations, dreams, and so forth). The ego appears within the conscious awareness, but the conscious awareness is independent of the ego.
